January 1987
• DAIL reports the cancellation of two planned conferences:
  » ‘Artability’, organised by Carnegie Council to follow up Attenborough report on the Arts and Disabled People (published 1986). Organised without consultation with disabled people. Protests at ‘its emphasis on art therapy and on administrators letting us into the arts world, rather than on our own creativity’. Concern about high ticket cost and access.
  » ‘Why Not?’. Initiative of West Sussex Association for the Disabled and Arun district council. Intended to be ‘a practical, hard-working conference which aims to tackle and solve the problems preventing nearly 5,000,000 disabled people from enjoying the arts and entertainment’. Cancelled ‘because of low number of people wanting to attend’.
• Contrasts with success of day conference ‘Disability - Our Arts, Our Culture’, ‘conceived, planned and executed by disabled people’, which led directly to setting up of London Disability Arts Forum (LDAF).”
